Here, the land and sea beg to be explored, and the offerings are as bountiful as your energy. Hike a mountain trail to a jaw-dropping vantage point. Walk the otherworldly landscape of Keahiakawelo, also aptly called the "Garden of the Gods." Or turn up some red dirt on an exciting four-wheel-drive off-road adventure.

Lānaʻi is an ocean lover's dream, its warm waters teeming with colorful fish and other sea life. Explore the awe-inspiring coast on foot. Charter a fishing boat. Take an exciting ferry ride from Mānele Harbor. Or set sail on a catamaran, complete with a guided snorkel tour of the island's fascinating reefs and protected bays. Feeling more adventurous? Scuba dive or SNUBA to your heart's content.

NATURE & CULTURE

If you're looking for an opportunity to get out in nature, Lāna'i is pleased to oblige. Sail on Lānai's cobalt blue waters and chances are you'll spy frolicking spinner dolphins. Join a tour to ensure you witness their impressive acrobatic displays. The clear, shallow waters of the 'Au'au Channel feature some of the world's finest whale watching from December through May. Take a tour or charter a boat from Mānele Harbor to see magnificent humpback whales breaching and spouting.

You can also set off on a horseback excursion through wooded trails and hidden valleys from the Stables at Kō'ele.

Your encounters with the people of Lānaʻi will be just as memorable. Friendly, welcoming and more than willing to “talk story” about life on Lānaʻi today or during the ranching and plantation eras, local residents represent the living history of the island. Be sure to stop by the Lānaʻi Culture & Heritage Center in Lānaʻi City to learn more about the rich natural history, Hawaiian traditions and heritage of this special place.

A photograph of a dirt trail winding through a lush forest. The trail is made of brown earth and small stones, curving from the bottom right towards the upper right. On the left side of the trail, there are large, vibrant green ferns and other dense foliage. In the background, several tall, slender trees with dark green needles stand against a clear blue sky. The overall scene is a peaceful, natural landscape.
